

Some good news for a ^{climate} change

In a world threatened by climate catastrophe, it's too easy to think that nothing positive is happening.

This would be very wrong

- The RAC sector has delivered more emissions savings than any other sector in the Australian economy.
- Refrigerant emissions have dropped by 90% in 25 years and will drop a further 85% over the next 15 years as we phase down HFC refrigerants.

That's a decrease of 99%

- Air conditioning and refrigeration equipment is 60% more efficient than it was at the start of this millennium and there's more to come.
- On any objective measure the refrigerant and air conditioning trades are delivering better service, recovering more refrigerant and making life better for people and the environment.
- Even though our runs are on the board, we need to do more and we can do more.

Our industry can be part of the solution.
